Late again?

Information on how being late affects your child's education

School starts at 9 a.m. The doors open at 8.50 a.m. and close at 9.10 a.m. If your child arrives later than this, they are deemed to be late for class with the following implications:

- They miss out on important learning, which could affect their achievement
- They don't have the social time to settle into class
- It can be embarrassing for them
- They may disrupt the rest of the class
- They miss out on explanations about work set for the lesson

If your child is 30 minutes late each day they miss half a day of learning a week!

Being late may result in your child being marked absent

Your child may feel the 'odd one out' when walking in to class late

Being on time will teach your child to be punctual which will help them in the future

Being prepared for school and arriving on time allows your child to fully concentrate in class

Mixing with friends before school starts is an important part of your child's wellbeing

Repeated lateness will mean that the Education Welfare Officer may visit you
